State University advertising. The following advertisement is appearing in the State papers, in some of them duly marked as an advertisement, in others as

WEST VIRGINIA UNIVERSITY.—The next secsion begins beptember 5th. "It is located in an intelligent, orderly community. It has ample buildings upon a picturesque spot, commanding a noble prospect. There is no finer site anywhere for an institution of learning."—Wheeling Intelligencer.

In selecting this striking and truthful paragraph from a newspaper whose opinions carry weight, the University administration has shown a creditable and unusual sagacity. The University people would have shown a still more liberal spirit if they had sent out to the State newspapers as paid matter the entire article from which the above was taken with such conspicuous presence of mind. Or, if they were not willing to spend so much money on the newspapers, they might have selected from a large and varied assortment something of more recent date.

But we are not disposed to split hairs. The liberal use of printer's ink is approved by successful business men. What the efby successful business men. What the effect of this particular demonstration will be, it is too early to judge. It may stiffen the backbones of some newspapers which larger more given to the mismanagement of larger with the backbones of some newspapers which Langtry publicly announced she was going home to her husband and other family have not given to the mismanagement of the University a cordial endorsement, and ot others it may make more valiant de-1 anders of Chairman Berkeley and the We shall have to wait and see. But while we are waiting it may be remarked that the administration has hit upon a very cheap sort of bribe.

None of these "reading notices" appear in the Intelligences. It is, we confess, "sour grapes." The Intelligencer is more o less in the advertising business, but has not been favored with these notices. For a long time we have had the regular adver-

ing public men, measures and institutions is also true; but Democrats in trade find it to their advadtage to advertise the INTELLI-

The selegraph Strike.

The Wheeling INTELL GENCER was against the operators in the strike at ties, but now that the associated Press dispatches are cut short, the shie éditor has shopped. It is now against the monopoly.

Stabenelle identic.

Our good friend is in error. There has been no flop in this neck of woods. The INTELLIGENCER is always against monopoly and has not waited till now to express its conviction that the Western Union Telegraph Company is a very bad kind of monopoly. It has been free to say this, and fair enough to add that so far as Wheeling is concerned that company generally gives accentable service. The INTELLIGENCER was not able to approve the method of beginning the strike. which looked very much like taking a snap judgement on the company and the busies of the country. The INTELLIGENCE does not rapturously applaud any strike, holding that there are better ways to settle differences between labor and capital, for example, by arbitration. But since there is a strike the INTELLIGENCER is able to approve the orderly, gentlemanly and womanly manner in which it is being conducted.

More than this, it has been said in these columns that the public looks to the com-panies to bring about a speedy settlement panies to bring about a speedy settlement so that telegraphic communication may be relieved of wasteful embarrassment. The International properties of the component of the component will not find this retort courteous too long to be reproduced in its widely read columns.

that, in common with a vast majority of readers, I sickened at the sight of her name. She came, she saw and she conquered. What did we see?

A well-shaped head, violet eyes, a doll face, an expanse of gums, a scrawny neck, no bust, knobby elbows, sinewy arms, tremendous hands, no legs and enormous feet. As a curiosity she was an attraction. Her stage performances were amateurish, but profitable. With her domestic life, it any, the public has no concern, but with her ostentatious display and her breach of every recognized rule of propriety, the public couldn't very well avoid having much to do, because she perpetually thrust herself and her affairs before the general gaze. general gaze.

FREDDIE'S COSTLY PLEASURE. Freddie paid dearly for his debasemen In one great jewelry store he spent $40,000 in presents for her, one item being a $25,000 necklace, A day or two before she sailed he bought in the same establishment a

She has done more to bring the stage into disrepute during her brief tarry here than any dozen professionals have done in a lifetime. She says she cleared $125,000 by her playing—a good term, for she certainly did no work—and she—bagged at least $45,000 we know of in the guise of imperishable jewels from her admirers. Discounting a little for bounce, let us say she carries with her—to her husband—a net $100,000. $100,000

The proper persons will please take notice that the INTRALICENCER continues to do business at the old stand, and as an advertising medium was nover so good as now. We are giving the institution a great deal of free advertising, and think it no more than fair that we shall have a share of such paid matter as may be going.

If the present controversy results in pointing out what the trouble is, and the Board of Regents have the nerve to remove the cause, then the criticism offered will prove a blessing. But if those in authority continue to harden their hearts and stiffent their necks and fail or refuse to do what is right the University will suffer. All wish to see the University prosper, Republicans and Democrats alike, with a few possible exceptions, but they will know that hide bound Bourbonism is never progressive, and applied to an institution of learning never fails to strangle it.

Blackman's hospitable mansion the party Blackman's hospitable mansion the party partook of some splendid venison steak, which soon satisfied their hunger, but whet their sporting appetites to the highest pitch—for a deer chase. Mr. Blackman kindly consented to please the boys, and the following morning the hounds were called and the party started. The expacious dogs struck a trail upon the mountain, about two miles from Mr. B's, and the toak to the river and were stationed at places where it was likely the deer would places where it was likely the deer wou eventually arrive. The excitement nov was very intense. The baying of the nounds could be heard in the dis far away as to be almost indistinct Presently the sound of the hounds became Presently the sound of the hounds became louder and louder. The boys were by this time wound up to an astonishing pitch of excitement. Presently a sound of some-body crushing through the brush attracted the attention of Dr. Russell and Wm. McGarey. The sounds came from a ravine through which a mountain brook wended its rocky way. The Doctor at this period was noticed to be quite out of sorts. Within a minute the deer bounded into view—a noble specimen of a buck. McGarey leftly and missed; the Doctor must have forgotten he had a gun, for he shook like an aspen leaf and never made an attempt to

The buck then took to the river. Estep and McCombs fired at him and river. Estep and McCombs fired at him and a convulsive jump told us he was wounded. Mason, although about 200 yards away, fired and—missed him also. Dr. Elder and J. McGarey together with Dr. Roussell succeeded in fording the river and in a short time came upon the buck a few hundred yards distant, badly wounded. Seeing the party, the buck suddenly leaped into a shallow run, Dr. Elder holding isst to his antiers. With the help of his comrades, he succeeded in dragging the buck upon dry land. He then cut the animal's threat in true hunter style. Dr. Russell being a little inquisitive at this stage of the game, got too hear the hind hoofs of the buck, which made him suddenly turn pale, reminding him of a mule's kick. The party then wended their way to Mr. Blackman's. The buck weighed 171 pounds.
